WELCOME BACK FROSTIFARIANS!!!

Oh how we missed you!! After a two year Pandemic hiatus, it is our honor to meet again (or for the first time) to celebrate Grandpa Bredo! The Shuttered Venue Operator's Grant funds (SBA) allowed us to work with the Town of Nederland and return from the deep freeze. The Boulder Small Business Development Center, Ellen Shannon PTAC navigator, National & Colorado Independent Venue Associations and the Nederland Downtown Development Authority all paved the way for this weekend to happen. Frozen Dead Guy Days is a cherished and unique Colorado tradition. We are so grateful to be able to have kept this fantastic frosty fiesta alive. We hope that FDGD serves as a bridge to gap divides between us, bringing together so many diverse individuals to celebrate life and inevitable outcome we all share. Join us with an open spirit on a journey to create new stories, make life long friends and raise a toast to Grandpa, who is still up in the Tuff Shed.

We ask you respect the Nederland community, it is a lot of folks for a small mountain town, so please follow all requests from law enforcement and All Season Security personnel, park only where directed, use those Port-o-Potties and tip your servers. The festival is striving towards a Zero Waste goal so make sure to put your waste in the proper receptacles.

For the safety of all, we will be adhering to current CDC Guidelines - Amanda & Sarah wish you all the most excellent frozen adventure on this Full Moon weekend.

The New Space Race is on – and Colorado is Leading the Way!

By AJ Gemer

Lunar Outpost, headquartered in Golden, Colorado, is leading the New Space wave of exploration to the Moon, with a mission to the Lunar South Pole in 2022!

Founded as a space technology startup in 2017, Lunar Outpost is now the industry leader in commercial space robotics, lunar surface mobility, and lunar resources. From our Canary Environmental Monitors to the creation of oxygen on Mars, our impact spans the solar system. Our flagship rover, MAPP, will be the first commercial rover to explore the lunar South Pole in 2022 and represents a paradigm shift in space exploration. While past NASA rover missions to Mars typically cost billions of dollars and only launch once every 7-9 years, the Lunar Outpost MAPP is far more cost-effective and can launch on very short timelines. Lunar Outpost envisions hundreds of rovers on the Moon in the next decade, lowering the barrier of entry for lunar operations and providing numerous opportunities for students, researchers, companies, and individuals to put their payloads on the Moon.

And that's not all – in December 2021, as part of NASA's Artemis program, NASA Administrator Bill Nelson awarded Lunar Outpost the first contract in history to collect and commercialize material from the lunar surface – for $1! This is a critical step in establishing legal and procedural frameworks for future space resources acquisition contracts and jump-starting the New Space economy, and serves as proof that the sale of space resources is a viable economic incentive for the commercial space industry. During our first mission, the MAPP rover will also carry a Nokia LTE/4G communications system, which will allow the Nova-C lander to provide a wireless communications network on the lunar surface and act as a communications gateway between the MAPP Rover and Earth. For our second mission in early 2024, Lunar Outpost has teamed with the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory (APL) to explore the mysterious Reiner Gamma magnetic swirls of the lunar surface. Scientists believe that this region holds new insights into the origin of our solar system, as well as into the physical properties of the Moon and other planetary bodies.

In addition to unmanned robotic missions, Lunar Outpost is proud to be a member of the Northrop Grumman Lunar Terrain Vehicle Team, helping to develop a solution for the next generation of human lunar exploration. Included on this team are Apollo astronauts Harrison Schmidt and Charlie Duke, using their wealth of knowledge from their time exploring the lunar surface to design the LTV to meet the needs of Artemis astronauts.

None of this would be possible without Colorado's excellent Aerospace industry and innovative entrepreneurial support – this is the time and place for the next generation of space exploration. This isn't the future – it is now!

THE FROZEN HISTORY

BY TERESA CRUSH WARREN

Nederland's infamous winter festival, Frozen Dead Guy Days, has evolved over the past 18 years like a snowflake into a blizzard. No other place on Earth has such a frozen icon to celebrate. Call it cabin fever or the Nederland Mardi Gras, by the third weekend in March the natives get restless and are ready for a good ol' mountain-style party in frozen fashion. Ranked by USA Today as one of the top five "Best Cultural Festivals," winner of the Everfest 300 Award for "Best Festival in 2017" and Everfest's "Favorite Unique Festival" Frozen Dead Guy Days continues on its journey into this, the 19th year of putting on the best frickin' freezer party in all the world.

Frozen Dead Guy Days is based on the discovery of a man on dry ice in a shed on top of a hill overlooking the town. Nederland didn't ask for this distinguished honor. He just seemingly landed in our backyard. Our controversial cryonaut, Bredo Morstol, pronounced ("breaddough more-stul") was a native of Norway who died in 1989 at the age of 89 and was frozen by his grandson, Trygve Bauge, also a Norwegian national. Transported to the United States on dry ice, Morstol was stored at Trans Time's facility in Oakland, CA until December 1993.

Trygve, who had a background in architecture and was then living in Nederland, had ambitions of setting up his own cryonics facility on property he owned near town. The proposed Rocky Mountain Life Extension Center never did come into being as planned, but the upshot was that Morstol ended up in a shed on Trygve's property. He rests there to this day, although the shed has been upgraded to a Tuff Shed, donated by the company several years ago. He is packed in dry ice which is replenished every month.

Due to an expired visa and some other questionable antics, Trygve himself was deported back to Norway in December 1993, just after he had moved "Grandpa" here. After his exit, he was able to continue maintaining Bredo on dry ice through several proxies, or as we refer to them, "icemen." Bo Shaffer of Delta Technogroup, Inc. cared for Grandpa for 16 years. Brad Wickham is Bo's successor and continues serving in that role today. Although at first resistant and nervous, Nederland residents and officials gradually came to accept the frozen grandpa in their midst.

Grandpa Bredo and Nederland first won world attention when Trygve's mother, Aud, applied for a Certificate of Occupancy to live there after Trygve had been deported. When the Town Board turned her down because the house had no running water, Aud turned to the woman sitting next to her at the Board meeting and said, "But who is going to take care of the dead bodies?" All hell broke loose upon those uttered words. Every imaginable law enforcement agency descended upon our Town and media from all over the world came to cover the story. That is how the story of Grandpa kept in a shed came to international fame.

Finally in 2002 the Chamber of Commerce decided to cash in on the frozen cow. It had been eight years since Grandpa's discovery and the fame wasn't going away. So fortune was staring us in the face. The Chamber decided to capitalize on the situation by inaugurating the Frozen Dead Guy Days Festival in 2002 to honor our icy resident and help businesses get through the Spring thaw.

The quirky event created, which can be summarized as the best "Dead Man's Party" in the world, has produced plenty of exciting moments in its history. Many have been documented by the national and international television along with the print media that is ever present.

In 2002, the New York Times ran a story on its front page and an interview with Teresa Crush Warren to Reuter's News Service brought in more than 50 requests from radio stations around the world. Even the PBS radio show, "What Do You Know" called in for a live interview during the first festival. Bill Guist of CBS' Sunday Morning News brought his camera crew in 2003. Articles have run in the Melbourne (Australia) Times, Forbes Magazine, the Boston Globe, Philadelphia Enquirer, Sports Illustrated, National Geographic, Sunset Magazine, Los Angeles Times, London Times, Associated Press, and various newspapers and magazines in Norway, and more.

One year, a Belgium reality television show filmed a segment during the event with Herbert Flack, a Belgian movie star. He went to local hangouts, recruited a coffin race team, built a coffin and ran the course. He also won the Grandpa Look-Alike contest after a professional makeup artist spent three hours turning his face into an icy monster.

In 2014, a Japanese show filmed Itteq and Degaw, two of that country's top TV stars taking part in the event. When they each submerged into the icy depths of the Polar Plunge, Itteq transformed into a butterfly and Degaw was inside a giant balloon that dramatically descended into the frigid water.

Additionally, there have been specials about Frozen Dead Guy Days on Discovery Channel, Travel Show, Games Across America and On the Road TV, which included the festival in an hour special highlighting their pick of the best four festivals in the country. An episode of Booze Traveler filmed during the 2018 festival featured video of host Jack Maxwell taking part in the event.

In its 19 years, Frozen Dead Guy Days has seen an astounding and remarkable growth in attendance and size. The first year, which was just a single day, attracted 1,700 people. The attendance the past couple of years—for what is now a three-day event—is estimated to have been close to 25,000.

Over the years, several breweries have commemorated the event with their brews. They include “Dead Guy Ale” by Rogue Brewing, New Belgium Brewery’s “Two Below,” “Six Feet Under ESB” by Wild Mountain Smokehouse & Brewery. This year FDGD has branded its own beer, Frozen Dead Guy Days Pale Ale, brewed by Lumpy Ridge Brewing Company, Estes Park. It will be for sale in cans in the tents during the festival. The unique design of the cans will be an instant souvenir.

Official poster designs have also evolved from the more stylized designs of the first eight years by Brent Warren to the more freeform designs of poster artist Jay V. Rizzi.

We know you will enjoy your time in Nederland at Frozen Dead Guy Days. Please be patient and understanding. Only during this festival does little quaint little Nederland fill with this many people. Please thank the more than 100 volunteers who help with this event and its many facets run smoothly. Buy lots of swag because that will ensure we can host FDGD #20. Thank you for attending, be safe and leave only your footsteps, (i.e. pick up your trash.) Until next year.....(hopefully.)

Gone But Not Forgotten

By Teresa Crush Warren

Nederland and the FDGD organization have lost five key dynamic personalities this year who played a significant role in many festivals. Their inclusion in this memorial page is intended to celebrate their lives. Our hearts are still heavy by their loss. We dedicate this page this year to Eric Mix, Kevin Malanaphy and Sharon Ferguson, three members of the FDGD family who were pivotal in many festivals of the past.

The first time I met Eric Mix was in March, 2002, the night after the first Frozen Dead Guy Days. A friend had a party on Ridge Road and all these roudy, bearded, mountain men made up most of the attendance. Now, I know my share of mountain men, but these guys were different. They were fired up, over the moon. Shortly, I discovered they were the team that won the first ever FDGD Coffin Race. The name of their team was "Working Man's Dead." And they went on to win the next two years of coffin races, then retiring thrice undefeated.

Eric was involved in some way with almost every FDGD festival. Whether it was directing traffic, moving merchandise, entertaining special guests or giving his two cents about how something could be improved for the following year, he could be counted on as long as he could drink free beer after his tasks were done. If you knew Eric, you knew how proud he was of having been a Marine in Vietnam, his love of rock climbing at Seneca Rocks and his daughter who lives in Summersville, WV. We were both from the Almost Heaven State. Those were good times reminiscing of our memories from back home. We miss you Eric!!

Another soul lost is Kevin Malanaphy, best known as Tie Dye Kevin. In fact, most people never knew his last name. Kevin was an incredible artist and his tie dye shirts were infamous. Kevin would create his tie dye design over an already printed FDGD t-shirt. He tie dyed the VIP trailer for those lucky FDGD guests who got to hang inside. For me, his greatest gift to Nederland was the murals he meticulously painted on the lower panels of the Covered Pedestrian Bridge. Check them out as you walk around Town this weekend. They are his legacy. Once some local teen wanna-be "Banksys" tagged the original paintings. Kevin didn't bat an eye. Within the next month, he started removing the graffiti and repainting the murals. He left us with a priceless treasure.

Never to be found without a welcoming smile on his face, Andy Hanscum also moved on to the spirit in the sky. The kindest man in security, he maintained the Peace at many Frozen Dead Guy Days, Nedfests and life. He is heartbreakingly missed by his Ned family of friends.

We bid farewell to Barefoot Kenny Gray. Beloved musician, loyal friend, true gentleman, and longtime Peaceful Security backstage FDGD guardian of the groove whose absence is difficult to imagine for Nederland and Colorado music communities. May your feet be dancing Kenny!

Finally, we must say goodbye to our dear friend, Sharon Ferguson. Sharon had lived in Nederland over 40 years and knew the landscape well. She was literally everyone's friend. She left her legacy as Coordinator of the Nederland Visitor Center where she recreated a viable Welcome Center that the entire Town could feel pride toward. Sharon's involvement with FDGD started in 2017. That year she came to a meeting which was advertised as "Volunteer for FDGD." All the positions that needed filled were posted. She volunteered to help with the merchandise (swag) tent. By the end of the weekend, she had already offered to Manage the merchandise tent the following year. Thus, it began. In retrospect, the FDGD position helped mold her for the Visitor Center Manager job when it came available less than a year later. And she excelled at it. Our grief in her passing hits us every time we drive past the Visitor Center.

I wish there wasn't a need to write this "in memorium" page each year. But like the nature surrounding us, to everything there is a season. By mentioning these and past tributes, we are trying to keep the memory alive of all the incredible people who have been involved with FDGD.

ALFONZO

BLUE BALL 4:30PM

Well beyond his years and hailed as a "real bluesman" Alfonzo brings music that transcends social boundaries while taking you on an emotional ride from the Delta to Chicago and then into unexplored territory. As a performer, songwriter, producer and multi instrumentalist from Colorado, Alfonzo's beatnik style Soul, Blues and Funk provides stories of a thousand different cities in his songs. Frequently sharing the stage with both local and nation's favorites, Alfonzo puts on a fully immersive stage performance that leaves the audience begging for more!

SMOOTH MONEY GESTURE

BLUE BALL 6PM

Smooth Money Gesture is the very essence of a modern American Rock and Roll band. Since the early 2000's, the band has been honing in on their sound, bringing their music from the East Coast to Alaska; finally landing in Nederland, Colorado where the band permanently resides. The quartet's sound is rooted in rock and roll with elements of funk, bluegrass, metal, and electronica producing a jam based high energy psychedelic creation all their own. With a variety of musical influences feeding the improvisational groove, and the majority of members contributing vocals and to songwriting, Smooth Money Gesture takes one on an adrenaline rich celebratory journey that never runs out of fuel.

DEAD FLOYD

BLUE BALL 8:30PM

Dead Floyd is a celebration of the music of two of rock and roll's greatest bands, The Grateful Dead and Pink Floyd, mashed together into one high-energy, unpredictable show. Drawing from both extensive catalogs of music, the Dead Floyd performances include early rarities to modern classics and everything in between. The love of the music of both bands inspires Dead Floyd to uniquely interpret the songs in a way that allows the music to timelessly live on and the legacy of both bands to stay alive to the next generation of fans. The excitement, creativity, and improvisation that went into both bands live shows of so many years is brought back for old and new fans to enjoy today.

POETRY SLAM

BY, SARAH MARTIN

Throughout our lives in times of importance; births, weddings, funerals and commencements, poetry is often included to reflect our universal occasions. Music is the poetry soundtrack of the human experience. While Frozen Dead Guy Days festival is a showcase for music and revelry, it is also a conversation starter about our inevitable mortality. We are proud to have the Dead Poetry Slam again this year on 1st Street on Sunday. Described in a 2016 article by Thomas Ivory Jr "A wild and mysterious spell is cast upon any venturing soul who steps upon the dusty Rocky Mountain peaks, who breathes in the cool pine-scent air of the continental glaciers, who shields their eyes from the bright elevated sun of a world this much closer to god and to nature.

As with any magic, there are consequences, inspiration, and empowerment. During Frozen Dead Guy Days in Nederland, Colorado, there is also poetic freedom in the form of the Frozen Dead Poet Slam.

"Poetry is a thing that everyone can do," said Marcus If, 49, Headmaster for Beyond Academia Free Skool in Nederland and producer of the event, "It's just a matter of waking people up to the fact that they can write poetry too."

Frozen Dead Guy Days is proud to be able to include poetry in the street on Saturday, look for someone standing on a stool as well as the Dead Poetry Slam Sunday. If you want to know more or get involved, here are some websites to ignite the poet in each of us:

Grandpa Bredo Caretaker, Brad Wickman, Retires

by Deb DAndrea

It's hard to believe it's almost been a decade since Brad Wickman accepted the grave responsibility of caretaking Bredo Morstoel, delivering and packing dry ice to keep him frozen. Taking the reins from Jane of Keep Magnolia Clean, Brad looked at caretaking Grandpa Bredo as lifesaving. He said, "The Universe presented this opportunity because of my situation, PTSD. It was a healing opportunity."

Caring for Grandpa Bredo came with its own challenges, some quite treacherous. Transporting the ever so important dry ice is a year-round, weekly endeavor. Most of us living in the mountains are familiar with winter and all that comes with it; which Brad said was the hardest season to deliver ice. "It's not just the treachery in the canyon, but the snow bank drifts which form around Grandpa Bredo's Tuff Shed, making access difficult."

This process is time consuming and strenuous, something Brad won't miss in retirement. But he says, "It's cool to tell myself while driving up, at that moment, I'm the only guy in the world doing this." In some ways, he's inadvertently developed a relationship with Grandpa Bredo; and will miss the connection with Town, and his involvement in shedding a positive "vibe" on Nederland as a whole. "The Town saved my life and it's my way of giving back," Brad says.

Some of the best times were the Grandpa Bredo Tours during Frozen Dead Guy Days. Brad liked to watch people's reactions, especially kids when taking them up. "They are surprised to see the 'castle,' they don't anticipate that." While most tours occurred daytime, Brad would sometimes find himself there after dark, wintertime. "It's not really spooky, but being in the shed with the lantern and coffin would make a great stage for a horror story!"

So, one may ask, what does the future hold? Brad will be passing the Grandpa Bredo Caretaking torch to Amanda Macdonald, Frozen Dead Guy Day Festival Co-Owner and Event Coordinator. Once the torch is passed, Brad is looking forward to his retirement and having the ability to travel with his wife who is a mobile lab technician currently in Maine.

I asked Brad how caretaking Grandpa Bredo changed his outlook on life and mortality. He said, "Caring for Bredo gave me an opportunity to face myself, and focus on the restructuring and redirecting of my existence, which I had almost derailed through drugs and alcohol, a result of self-medicating trauma symptoms. Interesting story, I did some work for Kirk Johnson, a psychologist in Gilpin; and it was him, while giving me a ride home, who suggested I had vicarious trauma from healthcare burnout. I feel after 10 years it's time to allow someone else the privilege; but I can always visit."

FROZEN DEAD A RETURN HOME

BY, JIM MCVEY

"Frozen Dead" will be shown at the Backdoor Theatre on Saturday, 2:00 pm. It will be shown twice on Sunday, at 2:00 pm and 4:00 pm. "Frozen Dead" is an independent TV series pilot that has won awards in three international film contests.

A young woman appears one night in a Colorado mountain saloon with her seven-year-old daughter and a bag full of money, begging to be frozen dead. Terminally ill and running from a dark past, she arrives just as the town of Nederland is preparing for its annual celebration of Grandpa Bredo, whose body remains cryonically preserved in the nearby mountains. Four local residents must decide her fate, including a young scientist who can't resist her beauty and courage. When an undercover FBI agent shows up, convinced that the woman—the prime suspect in a West Virginia murder—is hiding somewhere in town, he finds more than he can bargain for among a cast of eccentrics living on the margins of mainstream America.

The story of the American West has always been defined by a complicated mix of history and myth, and "Frozen Dead" is no exception. Just as western history has generated western myth, western myth has influenced western history. "Frozen Dead" capitalizes on this legacy, weaving historical events into its narrative texture, providing a dynamic backdrop for the drama to unfold. But it's hard to separate history from myth, and nothing is ever quite as it seems.

Historically, Nederland enjoys a rich tradition of mining, music, and colorful characters. In the 1860s, the nearby mining district of Central City and Black Hawk was known as the "richest square mile on earth." In the 1970s, the best rock musicians of the day journeyed to Caribou Recording Studio to make records and party in town. More recently, Nederland has gained international notoriety for Frozen Dead Guy Days, the festival named in honor of Grandpa Bredo.

But it's in the realm of myth where things get interesting. In "Frozen Dead," there is no illusion about the government swooping in to save the day. Town residents understand that, on some level, they are on their own. To help them comprehend these bewildering times, they turn to ancient indigenous traditions and prophecies. Virtually all the characters—town residents as well as those who come to Nederland to be frozen dead—share a deep yearning to return home.

Like our cultural obsession with vampires and zombies, the fascination with cryonics is rooted in themes of death and immortality. Driving this fascination is a sense of nostalgia—the desire to recover something that is already gone, or soon to be gone. Today, in the Anthropocene, that which is nearly gone is the Holocene—the geologic epoch in which we humans emerged and thrived as a species. If only on an unconscious level, we are experiencing the loss of the only world we've ever known. The existential threats posed by climate change and mass extinction foretell an uncertain, less hospitable world in the future. The idea that we can stop time through technology—in this case, cryonics—stems from a profound longing to return home. A return to the state to which we owe our existence.

Danni Mccarville

I moved to Colorado in 1993 My husband and I lived at the top of Caribou caretaking the mine for Tom Hendricks . We spent most of our days in the mountains getting to know almost every inch in our vast back yard. This is when I started my journey of becoming an artist . It started with a stained glass class that led into stained glass mosaics. I am primarily a stained glass mosaic artist. However , after 15 years of breaking photographs down into pixels to create a mosaic I realized that this technique had also taught me to draw . I had gained the skill to look at something and just draw it ! It was like I gained a super power ! I then evolved into painting and became obsessed with losing myself on a canvas

I combine a bit of fantasy with nature ...I don't really have an end vision when creating a painting I begin with people ,animals , or both then surround them in a natural world and the mood takes on a course of its own ...

I am still living in CO outside of Trinidad in the mountains You can find me at dannimacstudios on Instagram or Etsy.com

REBIRTH 2022 – DEAD GUYS FESTIVAL

*2022 has SO much potential for you!
22 is the master angel number that means dreams come true.*

Energetically this is the start of a new wave for your dreams, I call them hearts desires, to come true. Just like Dead Guys Festival, this is your rebirth and shifting from leaving a legacy at the end of your life to leaving a legacy TODAY.

In all esoteric systems this is huge year. Everything had to happen in the last two years to break down old foundations in order for us to build something greater.

In my Chinese Medicine Practice, this year is the year ALL the elements are walking into their home elements: water, wood, fire, earth, and metal. This hasn't happened in a long time.

This year CAN be the year where you are gifted your powers or be presented all your challenges to do your work. The last two years have presented us with many problems about death and fear. In dying, we/things/experiences may be REBIRTH.

We never truly die. What we do lives forever with the legacy we leave. For instance, this dead guy for Dead Guys Festival! How much joy and memories has he given since it all started?! With the rebirth of this event, there is more love and appreciation.

I'd like to share with you my story of rebirth, which is still unfolding at the moment of this publication. In January 2022, I went to Hawaii for 3 weeks for my Healing Voyage. I'm in my messy middle of an ulcerative colitis flare that has decimated my physical body to 10% since July 2021. On the second day of my trip, I'm hospitalized and need a blood transfusion. On the second week, I'm hospitalized again and need another blood transfusion. This is when I have my out-of-body experience.

Out-of-body (OB) and near-death experiences (NED) are different. In most cases, NEDs die and CHOOSE to come back. My soul just jumped out because it needed to stretch. Both come back changed. Most come back with a message and some gifts.

Anita Moorjani's NED on 2/2/2006 lead her to change lives and heal her cancer. Her book Dying To Be Me is a life changer. It has helped me understand the love and euphoric vibe that has filled me with my OB experience. Anita's message coming back was to live fearlessly. My message is to LIVE FULLY.

None of us are guaranteed tomorrow. This isn't a reason to live in fear. It's a reason to live more fully from your heart.

The following day after my OB I'm filled with clarity and intuition. Two days after my OB I randomly land in a house with a vortex. I knew I was on a different grid because I do space clearings. I felt it immediately when I got out of the car. There is a big picture in this vortex, it spoke to me.

I knew they were the muses. As I stood there I was recharged. That day was 1/22/22. Everyone in my field that day were my earth angels and that was when the muses came to me.

My spiritual ninja mission is to help you find peace in your head, heart, and home. I'm here to activate you by finding your muse. They told me what is going to save us is creativity and art.

Have you noticed the 2's synchronization? We are meant to do this life with others. Happiness is only real if shared. Your dreams will come true if you vibe LOVE and live a more heart-centered life. You must notice your blessing. Here are my energetic prescriptions for you.

💖 Notice all the heart shapes throughout your day. When you do, tap or high-five your heart and smile. You can also make the sound of "HAI!" This is the sound of the heart vibration.

Did you notice that this is also the sound of laughter? This is to bring in awareness of how much love is out there for you and everyone. Every time you do this, you are depositing in your love bank, the universal love bank.

💖 Make it a practice to do the heart breathe daily. Instead of breathing in your nose, breathe in through your heart and out your heart.

💖 Be conscious of what you wear around your heart as it is the energy you emanate. The colors, jewelry, pictures...

Doing these small things will increase your vibration to tune you up to the frequency of love, which is 500+. At the frequency of love, you can inflect more than 70K people.

You reinforce what you repeat. Change your frequency, change your life. You magically attract without force. You become a force.

💖 Now write down your 22 hearts desires. Read them out loud as much as possible. I have it recorded on my voice memo and listen to it every day several times to remember. Be sure to revisit them every month on the 22.

May all your heart's desires flow to you.

No Cradle-to-Grave Waste at FDGD2022

Zero Waste is all about keeping things out of the landfill and having them recycled as often as possible. Festivals tend to produce a lot of disposable waste, and it is important to FDGD organizers to minimize their waste impact. Sara Starr the Sustainable Solutions Specialist for 2022 FDGD leads the team working towards the goal of 90% waste diverted away from landfills. We hit 70% 3 years ago and think we can get closer to our Zero Waste target of 90% for 2022.

To get the job done, bins will be strategically placed based on waste output in that location and will be visible to festivarrians. Since the festival is throughout the town, it is likely that people will bring waste from other establishments into the festival area. The most important thing is to NOT contaminate the recycling containers with landfill material and vice versa since both containers will have to be put in the landfill.

Stations will be marked with what can and cannot go into the recycling containers. But if you are in a rush to get to the Turkey bowling event or are having a cranial freeze determining what goes where, we have volunteers stationed at waste receptacles, helping guide you quickly to the right bin. Without our volunteers this festival would not be possible, so please give them a thanks when you have the chance. YOU KNOW WHAT A CAN IS, please take the extra few seconds to get it in the proper receptacle.

HIGH PERFORMANCE
EARTHWORKS

Death from A to Z

BY TERESA CRUSH WARREN

People look to bury their loved ones in all kinds of ways and places these days. One to add to the list is an opportunity for people to have their loved ones orbit Earth or even the Sun. There's something extremely romantic about watching the stars at night imagining your Dad or sister up there having a hell of a ride. You are born on Earth. Yet you can be remembered forever in Space.

A friend of mine did just this about 7 years ago. It was the first launch of its kind. The only cargo was the ashes of 24 people, including some remains of Gene Roddenberry and John Doohan of Star Trek fame as well as Dr. Timothy Leary and my friend's Dad. The craft was the first rocket ever launched by Spain. So there was a lot of Spanish excitement around it. The company launching the craft was called Celestis. The rocket was made very light to make it easier for the rocket to drop its load quickly. My friend chose this company because it guaranteed there would be no space debris – All “memorials” are carefully designed so as not to create space pollution. After 1-10 years, the containers decay and fall to Earth like confetti.

My friend was very excited to find a launch of this sort. His father loved space, science and astronomy. It couldn't be more appropriate for his Dad. “Celestis” traveled faster and higher into space than any other burial service of its kind at the time – up to 130 km and up to 6 minutes in microgravity. His Father's load stayed in orbit for 6 ½ years. The loads all had tracking devices so their demise could be reported. All this for roughly $2,500, less than what most caskets cost.

Soon the debut of United Launch Alliance (ULA), the new Vulcan rocket, will blast off carrying remains of Star Trek's creator, Gene Roddenberry, with his wife, Mojel Barrett Roddenberry, actor James Doohan, who played Star Trek's “Scotty.” An additional 147 other people will accompany them into a permanent solar orbit after first dropping off an Astrobotic lander on the moon for NASA. Celestis, Inc. (of Centennial, CO) arranged the flight which will be the first commercial launch of remains outside of earth's orbit. This first-ever deep space memorial flight sells for $12,500. The flight is also expected to include remains of U.S. military veterans, so it's fitting for ULA, the primary space launch contractor for national security and intelligence missions.

What happens to the body after death is big business. Caskets cost thousands of $$ and the land they are deposited into cost more. Every year we bury enough caskets to measure 4 million acres of forest. That's enough to build over 90,000 homes. The body might decompose (slowly if it is embalmed) but the lacquered wood with brass and steel adornments will take generations to break down.

More than half of the US population chooses cremation, sold as a cleaner option. But in reality, just a different kind of bad. Every year North Americans alone use enough fossil fuels during cremation to drive HALFWAY TO THE SUN AND BACK.

So what do we do, then, in a death avoidant culture with a very real issue of bodies on its hands? We innovate. We use the elements. We look at how other countries and industries are doing it and we pave a new way.

If you can't afford the outer space orbit, there is a new technology that uses water (rather than fire) to break down the body. It produces a whopping-zero- emissions and uses about the same amount of water and energy that you would consume in an average 2 days of living.

It's also gentle to the body, breaking the soft tissues and organs down first, into a liquid that is an amazing fertilizer and can be used to grow plants. The remaining skeleton is clean, never burned, and returned to the family as a fine white powder. You can decompose in water and become a tree for a fraction of the price of traditional burial. So it's an economical choice as much as an ecological one. To learn more about water cremation, follow #water cremation #aquamation #dissolve #bodies #deatheducation #BeATree

Want to help ease the burden on your loved ones who will have to deal with your inevitable demise, without having to undertake too much work? Write down these key pieces of information. This can apply to you or someone else you want to plan for.

Death Certificate Details

Write down your full name, Social Security number, date of birth, city of birth, parents' full names, including mother's maiden name, and military service details, if applicable. All of this information is required on a death certificate.

Who To Call Contacts

List the most important family and friends to call with their phone numbers. Also write down professionals, such as your financial advisor, attorney, insurance agent and executor.

Important Information Locator

Let your loved ones know where to find your will or trust (if you have one), Power of Attorney documents, insurance policies, and DD214 form for veterans' benefits. Write down computer, phone and online passwords for accounts and social media. Include information on mortgages or loans, credit cards, bank accounts, utilities, retirement pension, and other financial accounts.

Your Valuables

List valuable items you own. Even if you don't own homes or cars, there may be valuables to appraise and distribute – jewelry, musical instruments, art, furniture, books, coin or stamp collections, and other items.

Death Details

At the very least, state your disposition preference – burial, cremation (by fire or water), donation to science, or body composting. If you preplan and prepay, put that paperwork with your other important papers. If you want to be perpetually frozen like Grandpa in the TUFF SHED®, it can be expensive. You can check into cryonic suspension with several organizations. Ideas about how you would like people to celebrate your life after you are gone will be appreciated more than you may realize.

If you want to “flesh out” this “bare bones” checklist with more details for your loved ones, visit www.AGoodGoodbye.com to download a free 10-page planning form. It's from Gail Rubin's book, A Good Goodbye: Funeral Planning for Those Who Don't Plan to Die. Or you can request the form with an email to Gail@AGoodGoodbye.com. Remember, talking about sex won't make you pregnant and talking about funerals won't make you dead.

Jason Rideout

I am a creative that is inspired by the world around me. Graphic art from the BMX and Ski Magazines of my youth inspires my work today. After becoming frustrated with available media being unable to depict the fun, flowing, and colorful world I pictured, I found Posca paint pens and have developed my style around that medium. My art endeavors to connect the subject to its surroundings by using my unique style which I ascribe to taking Van Gogh, Warhol, and Picasso and throwing them into a blender, adding my own twist to a focal point. I find inspiration in Drew Brophy, Nicolas Bott, and my father - who taught me about painting as I was growing up and encouraged me to follow my passion. I have worked with Frozen Dead Guy Days, Slash and Burn Slalom, Paddle Board Adventure Company, How You Doing Pizza, and the #1 rated Colorado burger joint, Backdoor Burger, from full murals to stickers. I have included a brief portfolio of my work and look forward to continuing our conversation.

Be rad,
Jason Rideout
